LL.M. (Master of Laws)

International Business Law (ENG)

- Graduates gain both practical and theoretical knowledge essential for success in an international environment. They learn to think strategically, resolve complex legal and business disputes, understand EU and international investment law, and negotiate effectively in multicultural contexts.
- The program develops skills required for managing strategic projects and creating business strategies based on ethics and sustainability. Graduates can apply intercultural communication and negotiation principles, critically analyze key business and investment decisions, and design solutions for current global challenges, preparing them for leadership positions in international corporations, consulting firms, and public institutions.
- The program is taught in English over the course of one year through online consultations with lecturers and guided self-study via the Student Section, which provides access to all essential study materials, information, and videos.

You will meet ...

Elmira Lyapina, Ph.D., LL.M.

Elmira Lyapina holds a Ph.D. in International Law (Charles University, Faculty of Law) with an academic focus on international investment and energy law. As a legal expert, provides support to companies in various areas of international law, including business, trade, commercial, corporate, civil, and immigration matters.

In addition to being an experienced researcher and lecturer for graduate and MBA students, she offers pro bono sessions on migrant rights.

Howard Rokofsky, M.A.

Howard Rokofsky (NYC, 1966) has been teaching at universities since 1996, and training corporate communication skills and leadership since 2002. In 2018 he published a book on the art of persuasion, and since 2020, he has largely moved online, conducting more than one hundred storytelling workshops and experimental seminars, engaging participants from around the world.

Student Section

The Student Section serves as a communication platform between the study department, students, and lecturers. As a student, you will find study materials, educational videos, electronic publications, and, most importantly, assignment topics for individual subjects.

Through the portal, you will also submit completed assignments for evaluation. The respective lecturer will upload a completed grading form with written feedback and a final grade (A–F).

In the case of the final dissertation, the lecturer uploads the opponent's or consultant's evaluation report.

Graduation Ceremony

Upon successful completion of your studies at the Institute of Law and Legal Science, you will receive an MBA or LL.M. diploma (or the diploma of your completed program), a diploma supplement detailing the program and academic results, and an international certificate issued by the International Education Society (IES).

Finally, you will be invited to a formal graduation ceremony held at the prestigious Rudolfinum concert hall in Prague.

Do you have a question?

Join us for a relaxed and non-binding meeting, where we'll treat you to a good cup of coffee, introduce you to the teaching facilities of Ústav práva, and answer any questions you may have about our MBA, LL.M., and other management programs.

We look forward to meeting you!
